Game Summary:

Team Timeout:

Coming into this game, Dominions, the top team and number one seed, was allegedly facing a lot of bad omens as the talk around the rink was speculating on another huge upset. Chatter was going on about the playoff bye team(s) being cursed from winning, the team that wins those seasonal individual awards being cursed, and looking back at last year to see the top overall consensus favorite team getting knocked out before the Finals in both seasons.

However, someone forgot to tell captain Dominic Defrancisco's team that this was not last seasons top team; with a different group of players, with a lot more playoff experience and mental toughness. Dominions scored two goals in fourteen seconds at the end of the second period, then scored three unanswered goals in the third period to leave no doubt for the win. How convincing was this win for Dominions? The team wins this game in a blowout and captain Dominic Defrancisco records 0 points on the game sheet. THAT fact is a scary thought of how balanced this team is.

For Hammertime, they have nothing to hold their head down on as they played (and competed) the season without thier top player on offense (and top three impact player in the league). This team will be a top team contender with Rob Sheridan back playing. Hammertime's fortunes changed quickly early in the second period in a 1-0 game when they scored to tie this game, only to have the goal overturned and not count on a close but correct high sticking call, negating this goal.

Manny Nunes led the way for his team, factoring in on four of his teams six goals with a hat trick and 1-assist as he made his playoff debut count in a big way. Manny single-handedly drove his team's offense this game.

Tony Medeiros stepped up on offense as he played a key role in breaking this game open in the second period, setting up a goal then scoring himself only fourteen seconds apart at the end of the second period.

Pat Pirone had himself a solid game, as he set up Manny's first goal with only three seconds left to play in the first period, then scored himself in the third period to make this a rout.

Flying under the radar but having his running legs going was Derrick Power who scored a goal and also played a key role at the end of the second period in setting up a goal to break this game open.

Perhaps overlooked in this game was the continuing solid play of goalie Sean Roach this season, as he stopped all 19 shots faced for the shutout.
